Market Outlook and Investment Strategy

US macro data generally showed steadily improving. The US Fed inclined to hike the interest rate, but the estimated time was postponed to the end of this year. The volatility in global market increased.

PBOC's move to depreciate CNY one time at 3% was a positive indication that the central government is still working on the financial reform. China's export may benefit from the weak currency, but the impact shall be limited. We believe that the central government will keep the expanding fiscal policies and loosening monetary policies in second half of 2015 to bolster the economic growth. We believe that the valuation of H-share is attractive at current level.
