Market Outlook and Investment Strategy

Mixed US macro figures indicated US Fed's dilemma on interest rate strategy, even though it still hinted possibility for one more interest rate hike in the coming March. BOJ decided to set the interest rate into negative territory came at surprise, which may further boost the USD. The world economy seems still in weak shape with only US as the exceptional case. China's GDP growth in 2015 for the first time came below 7%. The pace for economic restructuring and financial reform is slower than expected. The central government has to focus on the stimulus of real estate sector again, in order to bolster the declining FAI growth. We still see pressure for CNY depreciation by 3% given the deteriorating economic fundamental.
