Market Outlook and Investment Strategy

As of the end of first quarter 2016, the global economy was still in the struggling situation lacking solid recovery. EU and Japan planned to expand the QE; meanwhile, the US economy kept reporting recovery figures, and the US Fed indicated to further hike the interest rates for at least twice in this year.

After China has completed the important "Dual Conferences" in March, the central government has set less aggressive growth target for 2016: GDP growth target is 6.5%; and the M2 growth target remained loosening at 13%. The highlight of this year's policies is the expanding fiscal deficit. The central government has set higher fiscal deficit ratio at 3% (compared to 2.4% in year 2015). Another major focus is the supply-side reform, i.e., further redundant capacity cut for oversupply industries; such as coal and steel etc. The influence and implication for equity market generally shall be positive.
