Market Outlook and Investment

The global economy remains on the steady growth track. US reported strong ISM manufacturing PMI in December (59.7). The U.S. Federal Reserve met market expectations when it raised the federal funds rate by 25 basis points at its December Federal Open Market Committee meeting, and raised its GDP estimate from 2.1% in September to 2.5%. Market expects Fed will likely raise the rate 3 more times in 2018. Euro Zone's economy momentum is rather strong. Japan also remains on recovery and Nikkei Manufacturing PMI also remained at the expansion territory for 17 months. We believe that the amiable economic environment will help to bolster the strong performance of global equities.

China also kept reporting encouraging macro data. In particular, the official manufacturing Purchasing Managers' Index in Dec recorded at 51.6, which stayed in expansionary territory for the 17th consecutive month, while the credit growth was still at controllable pace with Total Social Financing expanded to CNY1600bn compared to previous CNY1040bn. We expect the CPI to be softened thanks to the easing hog price. As for the stock market, the CSI300 has touched 2 years new high and stay above 4000 level.

Looking forward to 1H18, we believe that the policies of de-leverage will continue and to prevent systemic risk will remain the theme, and thus we expect a neutral/tight monetary policy. We remain positive in Hong Kong / China equities and especially favor sectors that will be benefited from the consumption upgrade momentum in China, such as the domestic consumption and technology leaders. For cyclical players given the current revaluation trend and divergent outlook we will closely monitor and gradually reduce our position.
