Market Outlook and Investment

The global market presents divergent situations. US has reported rather strong numbers, with ISM Manufacturing Index recorded 59.8 in Sept and the unemployment rate kept flat at 3.9%. Policymakers on raised their benchmark federal funds rate by another quarter of a percentage point, lifting it to a range of 2 to 2.25 percent, which was highly anticipated. Most Fed officials expect to raise rates four times this year, which implies that the next rate increase could come as early as December, and at least three times in 2019 and once in 2020. On the other hand, we believe that the trade war tension between China and US has been intensified, while at the same time EM market shall see more tough time ahead. China also reported mixed data. In particular, the official manufacturing PMI in Sept recorded at 50.8 which stayed in expansionary territory for the 26th consecutive month, while the Exports growth soften to 9.8% compared to the previous 12.2%. We expect the CPI to rise substantially, as the hog price which constitutes a large bulk of CPI basket rebounded sharply due to the spread of swine fever, while vegetable prices are boosted by several weather events. As for the stock market, the CSI300 rebounded by 3.13% to 3,438.86. We are cautiously toward the sentiment for short term due the recent market correction, and have kept low positions accordingly, as china is in pain with both external and internal issues, including broken liquidity chain and the bursting of P2P. Policies uncertainty from tax invasion to social security fund may slow down fund flow to private sectors. Looking forward, we will focus on fundamental analysis and identify leading sectors and names with strong growth certainty and quality, to accommodate our investment strategy.
