Market Outlook and Investment

US stock market recovered during the past month, with Dow Jones rebounded by 7.19%, while S&P 500 was up by 6.89%, and Nasdaq has increased by 7.42%. The U.S. macro economy reported disappointing data, notably the ISM Manufacturing Index of June was 51.7, which beat the consensus of 51, while inflation declined to 1.8% from previous 2%.

During G20 summit, the U.S. president surprisingly agreed to suspend tariffs on Chinese goods. Market sentiment slightly improved since the trade tension seemed to be eased. And market is also expecting that Fed may enter a rate cut cycle despite Fed Chairman Jerome Powell played down rate cut speculation in late June.

Chinese official manufacturing PMI in June was 49.4, which remained in contraction area, while the Export growth dropped picked up to 7.7% from previous -2.7%. CPI increased to 2.7% in May, which was the highest rate since October last year, mainly due to a surge in prices of food as an outbreak of African swine fever sent the price of pork soaring. The Sino-US trade dispute seemed to be eased again after G20 summit, but President Trump's next movement is still unpredictable. As for the stock market, the CSI300 rebounded by 5.39% to 3825.59.

In regard to our investment strategy for Hong Kong/China market, as the prospects of trade war are still unclear, a rebound in global trade and capex later in the year are less likely, we would like to look for some stabilization in momentum before considering a further underweight, and we will maintain defensive cash level, though we turned a little positive than a month ago. We believe in longer term the fundamental results will act as the major driver of market direction, and we would position ourselves accordingly.
